Staples Farm plan goes to county
Developer says it’s his final shot
By Cara O'Brien

A developer twice denied by the city of Loveland will seek approval from Larimer County.

On Tuesday night, Western Region Enterprises Inc. presented its development plans for a mixed-use project called Westview Place.

The proposal, called Westview Place, is north of Fifth Street and east of Taft Avenue.

About 30 people from the community spoke about the project before a packed City Council chambers.

The council at the time denied the annexation and development plan, citing concerns about development in the area.

The same issue resulted in a lawsuit filed by the developer.

On Wednesday, Western Region Enterprises Inc. said the company will give up trying to annex and will instead seek approval from Larimer County.

After last night’s meeting, if we can’t process through the county, they won’t have a marketable property, and it’s frustrating,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

“We can’t just keep revolving the same door because it’s not feasible for us as a developer, for our customers,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

Diette said the company will probably give up trying to annex the property and move forward with building the property.

After Thursday night’s meeting, it’s his final shot.

But the need to weather the storm will persist.

A developer twice denied by the city of Loveland will seek approval from Larimer County.

On Tuesday night, Western Region Enterprises Inc. presented its development plans for a mixed-use project called Westview Place.

The proposal, called Westview Place, is north of Fifth Street and east of Taft Avenue.

About 30 people from the community spoke about the project before a packed City Council chambers.

The council at the time denied the annexation and development plan, citing concerns about development in the area.

The same issue resulted in a lawsuit filed by the developer.

On Wednesday, Western Region Enterprises Inc. said the company will give up trying to annex and will instead seek approval from Larimer County.

After last night’s meeting, if we can’t process through the county, they won’t have a marketable property, and it’s frustrating,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

“We can’t just keep revolving the same door because it’s not feasible for us as a developer, for our customers,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

Diette said the company will probably give up trying to annex the property and move forward with building the property.

After Thursday night’s meeting, it’s his final shot.

But the need to weather the storm will persist.

A developer twice denied by the city of Loveland will seek approval from Larimer County.

On Tuesday night, Western Region Enterprises Inc. presented its development plans for a mixed-use project called Westview Place.

The proposal, called Westview Place, is north of Fifth Street and east of Taft Avenue.

About 30 people from the community spoke about the project before a packed City Council chambers.

The council at the time denied the annexation and development plan, citing concerns about development in the area.

The same issue resulted in a lawsuit filed by the developer.

On Wednesday, Western Region Enterprises Inc. said the company will give up trying to annex and will instead seek approval from Larimer County.

After last night’s meeting, if we can’t process through the county, they won’t have a marketable property, and it’s frustrating,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

“We can’t just keep revolving the same door because it’s not feasible for us as a developer, for our customers,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

Diette said the company will probably give up trying to annex the property and move forward with building the property.

After Thursday night’s meeting, it’s his final shot.

But the need to weather the storm will persist.

A developer twice denied by the city of Loveland will seek approval from Larimer County.

On Tuesday night, Western Region Enterprises Inc. presented its development plans for a mixed-use project called Westview Place.

The proposal, called Westview Place, is north of Fifth Street and east of Taft Avenue.

About 30 people from the community spoke about the project before a packed City Council chambers.

The council at the time denied the annexation and development plan, citing concerns about development in the area.

The same issue resulted in a lawsuit filed by the developer.

On Wednesday, Western Region Enterprises Inc. said the company will give up trying to annex and will instead seek approval from Larimer County.

After last night’s meeting, if we can’t process through the county, they won’t have a marketable property, and it’s frustrating,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

“We can’t just keep revolving the same door because it’s not feasible for us as a developer, for our customers,” Larimer County Commissioner Steve Johnson said.

Diette said the company will probably give up trying to annex the property and move forward with building the property.

After Thursday night’s meeting, it’s his final shot.

But the need to weather the storm will persist.
Staples Farm plan goes to county
Developer says it’s his final shot
By Cara O'Brien
Loveland Reporter-Herald

A developer twice denied by the city of Loveland will seek approval from Larimer County.

On Tuesday night, Western Farm LLC, a company owned by Jerry Diette, presented its development plans for a site about a mile west of Taft Avenue between 16th Street and 20th Street.

Twenty minutes later, it’s snowing. A honeybee takes flight after collecting nectar from a Japanese iris flower Wednesday near the Loveland Public Library. (Photo by John Faussett)
Provincial elections likely this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesters blocked traffic and government buildings in Washington, acted out a high-drama street scene in St. Louis, and banged drums in a parade through San Francisco on Wednesday to mark the

fifth anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Iraq.

In other, more somber observances,

organizers set up a two-mile long wall of flowers in downtown Los Angle, with an emphasis on commemorating soldiers killed in action.

They said they hope the wall will be long remembered in the decades ahead.

“We’re not paying attention anymore,” she said. “My son has left his friends. He’s grown up, he’s had to go through things no one has to go through, and over here they’ve forgotten. They just go shopping instead.”

On previous anniversaries, tens of thousands of people marched through

major U.S. cities, and more than

100,000 gathered on several occasions

leading up to the invasion.

Only a few hundred marched for one of Wednesday’s largest gatherings, in Washington, the crowds size perhaps 200 yards wide, behind a late-senior system that stretched the length of the center.

Dozens of people were arrested, most of them at demonstrations in San Francisco, Washington and St. Louis.

Demonstrators also converged in

Ohio, where more than 200 took to the steps of the U.S. military killed in Iraq, while in

Francisco on Wednesday to mark the

fifth anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Iraq.

Operations in Washington, the crowds’ size per-

ning U.S. economy has caused Americans to forget about the war.

“We will probably see an increase of violence,” said Dillard, who said he served in Iraq in 2003.

Dillard, a former Marine, is a member of the U.S. military’s

Public Affairs Office.

He said Dillard said that rapid

progress on the project.

Although many details

must still be worked out because they a lot of plans the United States is making progress and eventually will still be able to claim some success in Iraq.

Masked protesters are arrested by police Wednesday in Washington, D.C., after they would be released from a military recruitment office in Washington, the crowds’ size per-

ceasing U.S. economy has caused Americans to forget about the war.

“We’ve not paying attention any-

more,” she said. “My son has left his friends. He’s grown up, he’s had to go through things no one has to go through, and over here they’ve forgotten. They just go shopping instead.”

On previous anniversaries, tens of

thousands of people marched through

major U.S. cities, and more than

100,000 gathered on several occasions

leading up to the invasion.

Only a few hundred marched for one of Wednesday’s largest gatherings, in Washington, the crowds size perhaps 200 yards wide, behind a late-senior system that stretched the length of the center.

Dozens of people were arrested, most of them at demonstrations in San Francisco, Washington and St. Louis.

Demonstrators also converged in

Ohio, where more than 200 took to the

steps of the U.S. military killed in Iraq, while in

Francisco on Wednesday to mark the

fifth anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Iraq.

Operations in Washington, the crowds’ size per-

ning U.S. economy has caused Americans to forget about the war.

“We will probably see an increase of violence,” said Dillard, who said he served in Iraq in 2003.

Dillard, a former Marine, is a

member of the U.S. military’s

Public Affairs Office.

He said Dillard said that rapid

progress on

the project.

Although many details

must still be worked out be-

cause they a lot of plans the United States is making progress and eventually will still be

able to claim some success in Iraq.

Masked protesters are arrested by police Wednesday in Washington, D.C., after they would be released from a military recruitment office in Washington, the crowds’ size per-

ceasing U.S. economy has caused Americans to forget about the war.

“We’ve not paying attention any-

more,” she said. “My son has left his friends. He’s grown up, he’s had to go through things no one has to go through, and over here they’ve forgotten. They just go shopping instead.”

On previous anniversaries, tens of

thousands of people marched through

major U.S. cities, and more than

100,000 gathered on several occasions

leading up to the invasion.

Only a few hundred marched for one of Wednesday’s largest gatherings, in Washington, the crowds size perhaps 200 yards wide, behind a late-senior system that stretched the length of the center.

Dozens of people were arrested, most of them at demonstrations in San Francisco, Washington and St. Louis.

Demonstrators also converged in

Ohio, where more than 200 took to the

steps of the U.S. military killed in Iraq, while in

Francisco on Wednesday to mark the

fifth anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Iraq.

Operations in Washington, the crowds’ size per-

ning U.S. economy has caused Americans to forget about the war.

“We will probably see an increase of violence,” said Dillard, who said he served in Iraq in 2003.

Dillard, a former Marine, is a

member of the U.S. military’s

Public Affairs Office.

He said Dillard said that rapid

progress on

the project.

Although many details

must still be worked out be-

cause they a lot of plans the United States is making progress and eventually will still be able to claim some success in Iraq.